

Fears of a Leaf

Write one to two paragraphs on the fears of a leaf. Is it afraid of the changing seasons? What about fire? Or being stomped on and falling off a tree? Being blown away? What did your leaf do to keep it's fear from happening? Tell your leaf's story . . .

Once upon a time there was a leaf named "Red." It got its name for its beautiful red color. It was part of a tall Maple tree. Red was afraid of the coming Autumn season. It knew that cold nights were ahead, and its food supply would be running low and eventually fall away from its other leaf friends, and land somewhere. Red came up with a plan. Red had a close friends nearby named Sugar and Silver. They too were afraid. So they banded together their stems and huddled their leaflets together so they keep warm and not be easily blown away. Also, the stronger their stem the more likely they would stay attached to their beloved tree that had provided their home and food supply for so long. As the Autumn days drew nigh, they saw many of their fellow leafy friends fall away.

They however did not. They stayed bracing the cold days and months ahead, and we're glad they had each other.
